

Long Lost Gamers Indexes Over 6,000 Gamers to Help Reconnect Old Friends

LLGamers.com expands its database with community-sourced profiles, giving players more ways to search, discover, and track old gaming connections

In the early 2000s, gamers formed friendships through multiplayer games like StarCraft, Halo, and World of Warcraft. Over time, many of those players lost touch as games, platforms, communities, and usernames changed.

The Reddit community r/longlostgamers has helped players search for former teammates and friends. However, finding a specific person can be difficult.

LLGamers.com now indexes posts and comments from r/longlostgamers, allowing users to search by gamertag and quickly find relevant posts and profiles. If a gamer isn't found, users can add their handle to a watchlist to get notified when a matching post or profile appears.

Key Features Include:

- Gamertag Search: Search for an old gaming handle and find relevant posts, profiles, and mentions from r/longlostgamers.
- Google-Optimized Profiles: Formats raw Reddit posts into clean gamer profiles, making handles easier to discover in Google search results when players look up their former usernames or lost friends.
- Gamertag Watchlists: If the person you're looking for hasn't appeared yet, add their gamertag to a watchlist and receive a notification if they appear or post in the future.
- 6,000+ Gamers Indexed: Makes years of r/longlostgamers posts searchable through a dedicated interface built for finding old gaming friends.

LLGamers.com is free to use and available at <https://llgamers.com>.

About

LLGamers.com is a free searchable database of gamer profiles that helps players find and reconnect with old friends. The platform indexes native profiles and gaming-community posts and comments to make gamertags easier to search and discover.

Media Contact

email: press@llgamers.com

press kit: <https://llgamers.com/press>